

Andy Canion is a supervising environmental scientist in the Water Resources Bureau at the St. Johns River Water Management District with experience in water quality analysis, biogeochemistry, and phytoplankton ecology. In his present position, he leads a team whose projects include lake and wetland restoration and water quality improvements.