

St. Johns River Water Management District began water quality restoration in the Upper Ocklawaha basin around 1990 with the inception of the SWIM program. The major component of the program was acquisition and restoration of muck farm lands that had been developed on wetlands surrounding the basin lakes. This presentation will document changes in phosphorus loading and water quality in the basin lakes since that time.